About the film, "Ripe for Change:" The debates raging in California over issues of food, agriculture, and sustainability have profound implications for us all, especially in a world where scarcity is the norm and many natural resources are diminishing. "Ripe for Change," is a fascinating documentary originally shown on PBS in 2008. It explores the intersection of food and politics in California over the last 30 years. It illuminates the complex forces struggling for control of the future of California's agriculture, and provides provocative commentary by a wide array of eloquent farmers, prominent chefs, and noted authors and scientists. The film examines a host of thorny questions: What are the trade-offs between the ability to produce large quantities of food versus the health of workers, consumers, and the planet? What are the hidden costs of "inexpensive" food? How do we create sustainable agricultural practices?
